

THE 2026 WATCHTOK ENTHUSIAST SURVEY

WatchTok can prove what brands still can't see

Presented by Cris Bjelajac · @GatorCris · Founding Creator Partner Briefing

Has this ever happened to you?

TikTok still is entirely unknown or considered a bad investment.

Hello Cris, we use TikTok already as a platform but this type of marketing isn't something we can manage for now, we need to focus on the publication and reviewers. That being said, we absolutely appreciate that influencer marketing can work in some cases but from our experience it has not been very profitable for us in the past so we will respectfully pass on this opportunity.

Anecdotal evidence will not always persuade a savvy marketer.

But for Brands who are open to discovery, this is more likely...

Real brands, real movement. Not proof of scale — proof it's real.

DeMarco Watch Co.

A local Boston brand. The founder started skeptical of TikTok entirely. Lost investment on YouTube Creators.

Since getting involved in WatchTok in April 2026, he's sold roughly 200 watches — most of his production run — and credits the channel directly. He now posts regularly, and his following keeps growing.

OraOrea

The brand owner secured his own TikTok handle and started posting consistently.

He's since loaned models to creators for live shots, his follower count is climbing, and the investment is visibly paying off — for him and for the creators involved.

These are anecdotes, not data. That's exactly the gap this survey closes.

What's missing is scale and proof

Anecdotes convince one founder at a time. Data gives every creator in this room a pitch that doesn't depend on being believed.

- 1 Discovery of a watch or brand
- 2 Seeing how it looks and wears in real life
- 3 Product education & understanding
- 4 Validation of the brand or seller
- 5 Comparing competing options
- 6 Confidence before purchase
- 7 Enjoyment & belonging after purchase

The question isn't whether TikTok closes the sale.

It's where creator content makes a buyer more likely to keep moving toward YES. This survey measures exactly that, across all seven stages.

The real case: TikTok-discovered buyers act on small brands

Split respondents by how they discovered their last watch, then compare the small-brand actions they've actually taken.

Illustrative cross-tab concept — sample values only. Not pilot findings.

Source items: Q26 (first discovery source for most recent watch) and Q30 (small-brand actions taken, past 12 months).

Creators often close the sale, not just open it

Asked what ultimately gave them confidence to buy, respondents point to a specific, nameable factor — not vague brand awareness.

Illustrative distribution — sample values only. Not pilot findings.

Source: Q28 — what ultimately gave the respondent confidence to buy (select one best answer).

What makes a creator worth trusting on a small brand?

SAMPLE

Not a popularity contest — a specific, multi-part trust profile brands can actually brief creators against.

Illustrative profile — sample values only. Not pilot findings.

Source: Q24 — creator qualities that most increase purchase confidence (select up to three).

Why this needs all of us

Credible data needs a broad, real audience of enthusiasts and collectors — not one account's following.

100k+

combined followers across the invited creators

700

fully completed surveys —
the floor, not the ceiling

shared report — everyone gets the same data,
Cris included

700 is modest given our combined reach — it's the threshold for statistically meaningful data from real collectors and enthusiasts, not casual takers. If turnout runs soft, we run another promotion round. No drama.

700 completed surveys should provide stable topline findings and allow useful comparisons among major respondent groups.

What I'm asking, what you get

THE ASK

- One launch-week TikTok, strongly encouraging participation
- Share the link & QR code
- Clearly ask followers to complete the full survey
- Light ongoing support — a mention or reminder during Lives when it fits, additional daily mentions here and there if you can, share other members videos

WHAT YOU GET

- The complete final report, at no cost — same report Cris gets, no tiers
- A ready-to-use promo kit: link, QR code, talking points, graphics, FAQ
- Standing to open brand conversations backed by real data, not a testimonial

Independence, honesty about what's unresolved

Independence

No brand sponsor commissions or reviews this survey. Brand employees can only take part as individual collectors.

Privacy

Referral counts and any optional email collection are being handled deliberately — decisions aren't defaulted into, and results stay private.

Operating Principle

This program is designed to be Creator led research. Founders are expected to contribute with feedback and real-world experience.

What's not decided yet

Any future consortium or commercialization is a conversation we have together, after the data proves itself — not a promise made today.

Suggested Posting Guidelines

Enthusiastically Enthused

Stress to your followers the importance of WatchTok and the community we have created. If they consider themselves part of WatchTok, whether posting or consuming video content only, we want them to take the survey.

Finishing is Important

It's a pretty long survey. Give them a gentle warning to set aside some time to complete it.

Make it EASY

3 Options:

1. Share the URL
2. Share the QR Code
3. Or both!

Make them feel like part of the mission

Tell them this is IMPORTANT, to let the brands know we exist and we buy watches. "Start showing us THE LOVE!" Encourage them to share the survey and your video with their friends and followers.

Have fun with it!

Make them laugh, make them Goon it. CRAB RANgoon it. This is going to be interesting data.

Put the QR Code in your video

Ask them to take a screenshot, and open up their Photos later, and long press the code.

Or just go to the URL:
